What are assisted reproductive technologies (ART)?

Many times, individuals cannot become pregnant without specialized medical care. As the name implies, ART procedures are those that employ advanced technologies to help those individuals become pregnant. The methods used to achieve pregnancy by artificial or partially artificial means are collectively known as Assisted Reproductive Technologies (ART).

What is third-party reproduction?

Third-party reproduction refers to a process where another person provides sperm and/or eggs, or embryos, or where another woman provides her uterus so that the intended parent can have a child. The third party's involvement is limited to the reproductive process and does not extend to raising of the child.

What is surrogacy?

A surrogate is a woman who carries a baby through the pregnancy for another person. Gestational surrogacy involves the use of IVF where the embryo is implanted by embryo transfer. Traditional surrogacy involves the artificial insemination of the surrogate, usually utilizing the intended father's sperm.

“Meryl’s passion to help intended parents comes through in all that she does. Every day we look at our twin girls with wonder... We’ve never felt so content and blessed.”

“Meryl was my able lawyer, providing me with the security of knowing that everything was being done properly... my matchmaker, finding me the perfect surrogate to bring my children into the world. But she was also my friend, holding my hand at tough moments and genuinely sharing in my joy.”

Can we use a sperm donor and/or an egg donor in a gestational surrogacy?

Yes. In many cases, the sperm and egg of the intended parents are utilized; however, in some cases either a sperm donor or an egg donor, or sometimes both are utilized. Other cases will utilize donated embryos.

Can we use our own surrogate and still work with you?

Yes. ART Parenting will prepare the legal agreements, and can also manage expense accounts and assist the parties through the process, including taking care of the necessary paperwork or court order for the birth certificate before or after birth.

Can we use our own egg donor?

Yes. You will still need to have an egg donor agreement prepared. In that case, your donor will be screened medically by your IVF center.

How long does it take to be matched with a surrogate?

You can be matched immediately, or it may take a few months. This will entirely depend upon what is important to you in a match.

How do we get started with the process?

Please visit our website at ARTparenting.com where you can submit an inquiry form. We will provide you with information about how we might be of assistance to you, and can make arrangements for a free initial consultation.
